PETER WALL INSTITUTE FOR ADVANCED STUDIES – INTERNATIONAL RESEARCH ROUNDTABLE
Re-Imagine Aging: Adding Life to Years

THE ISSUE

- The proportion of older adults in the population is growing faster than any other age group. This rapid demographic shift has been classified as one of the world's most challenging, urgent and 'wicked problems' – it calls for immediate change at every level of society.

How can you re-imagine aging?

OUR APPROACH

- There is at least one thing Roundtable participants have in common: a commitment to create positive change for our aging society.
- As our academic and professional lives charge 'full-steam ahead,' we rarely have the opportunity to come together and reflect on the BIG and pervasive concepts tethered to our work, and to critically consider what these concepts mean for our professional practices.
- In the spirit of exploration and collaboration, sessions are designed for interactive, open ended, dialogic inquiry and are centered around the various perspectives, practices and ideas that frame current understandings of 'aging'.

Re-Imagine Aging: Adding Life to Years

OBJECTIVES

1. Engage

- Orient to the various perspectives and practices that shape our work and surface the underpinning assumptions.
- Reflect on the dominant influences that frame ways of understanding ‘aging.’
- Showcase the rich diversity of experience of roundtable participants.

2. Deconstruct

- Critically deconstruct the perspectives, practices and interpretations of aging.
- Discover interactions between various perspectives.
- Consider what the perspectives and practices in aging mean for the lived experience.

3. Synthesize

- Identify areas and actions that compel us moving forward and that allow us to truly re-imagine aging in a more realistic, holistic and celebratory way
- Reflect on how the learnings impact our work moving forward

	KEYNOTE PRESENTATIONS Dr. Adrian Bauman, Professor, School of Public Health, University of Sydney Australia, co-Director of the WHO Collaborating Centre on Physical Activity, Nutrition and Obesity Re-imagine 'active aging': what would it look like? A more physically active elderly population would be healthier, happier, and participate more in social and community activities. But how much activity is needed for older adults? Does "one size fit all"? New ways of thinking about 'active aging' needs a consideration of the newest epidemiological evidence on which health outcomes are improved by activity, what types of activity make for healthy seniors, and how to implement this across populations. Dr. Judith Philips, Dr. Judith Philips, OBE PhD FAcSS FLSW FRSA, Professor of Gerontology and Deputy Principal (Research), University of Stirling Re-imagining aging through a geographical lens How spaces and places are designed, interpreted, used and experienced by older people has an impact on their quality of life, health and identity. Yet how we design environments that are inclusive of older people and ideal for aging as well as convey positive images of later life is a challenge for planners, architects and policy makers amongst others. A spatial (geographic) lens in reframing aging theoretically, conceptually and methodologically has considerable potential to support more positive images of aging to emerge. FACILITATED DISCUSSION
